Workshare issue new metadata guidelines

Following February's warning, by the US District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania, that metadata continues to remain in documents being uploaded to the court server and that such data may reveal damaging and confidential information, Workshare has published a new Best Practices Guide to Removing Metadata in Court Submissions. The guide, which can be downloaded free of charge, discusses the challenges associated with cleaning metadata from documents and protecting organizations from the inadvertent disclosure of proprietary information. The guide also warns that as legal teams review materials and forward documents electronically from person to person, metadata may be automatically generated revealing when it was written, the author and more.

Frayman aim to ease WSJ's conflict worries

With The Wall Street Journal last week (7 April) running a major article on the problem of 'big blue-chip law firms' losing potentially lucrative work to smaller and mid-size firms because of ABA and state bar conflict of interest rules, The Frayman Group has just announced the filing of multiple patents relating to the automation and streamlining of conflicts of interest search, management and clearance processes. These technologies are ↪ ↪ incorporated in the Frayman Compliguard Analyze and Compliguard Clear applications.

Frayman Group SVP products & chief marketing officer Alp Hug said the applications are aimed at "leveraging innovative approaches to change the focus of a conflicts department from repetitive, arduous work to strategic decision making. In doing so, we are helping law firms reduce the most time consuming of their new business cycle from multiple business days to mere minutes." Hug adds that "This approach reduces risk associated with 'knowledge gaps' that can occur from staff transitions and departures, while improving the effectiveness and efficiency of conflicts searches, and providing pre- and post-search analytics to increase the thoroughness of the vetting process." Compliguard conflicts clearance requests can even be handled by Blackberrys and iPhones.

- The Frayman Group has also announced a partnership with Smart WebParts to deliver out-of-the-box integration between the Frayman Compliguard Protect suite (of ethical walls, information barrier and unusual activity monitoring applications) and the Smart Time on-demand time capture and time entry system.

Altman Weil and Project Leadership in alliance

Two of the legal market’s largest independent consulting groups – Altman Weil Inc and Project Leadership Associates (PLA) – have signed a strategic alliance agreement. Both organizations have already worked together on projects for law firms and corporate legal departments, and the new alliance formalizes this relationship.

Along with Altman Weil bringing its 40 years track record of legal management consultancy to the alliance and PLA bringing in its business and technology consulting experience, the two organizations have formed a joint task force to develop new market offerings that leverage their expertise, including pricing strategies, project management and post-merger integration. When the news of the alliance first broke earlier this month, the sentiment on Twitter was the move was probably inevitable following the merger late last year of Hildebrandt and Baker Robbins.
